destination

Can Tho is the leading city in the Mekong Delta and is regarded as the 'Rice Bowl' of Vietnam. The Delta is also known as Cuu Long, or Nine Dragons, referring to the nine tributaries of the Mekong River. Meandering through the Delta and interconnected by a network of canals, the tributaries enrich the soil with annual alluvial deposits and support centuries-old riverside farming and fishing communities.

A visit to the region will leave heart-warming impressions of the Delta's vibrant and enduring river culture, and its delightfully diverse colours, images and sounds. Every morning, fishermen and farmers take their sampans and houseboats through tree-lined canals that lead to traditional floating markets and riverside towns.

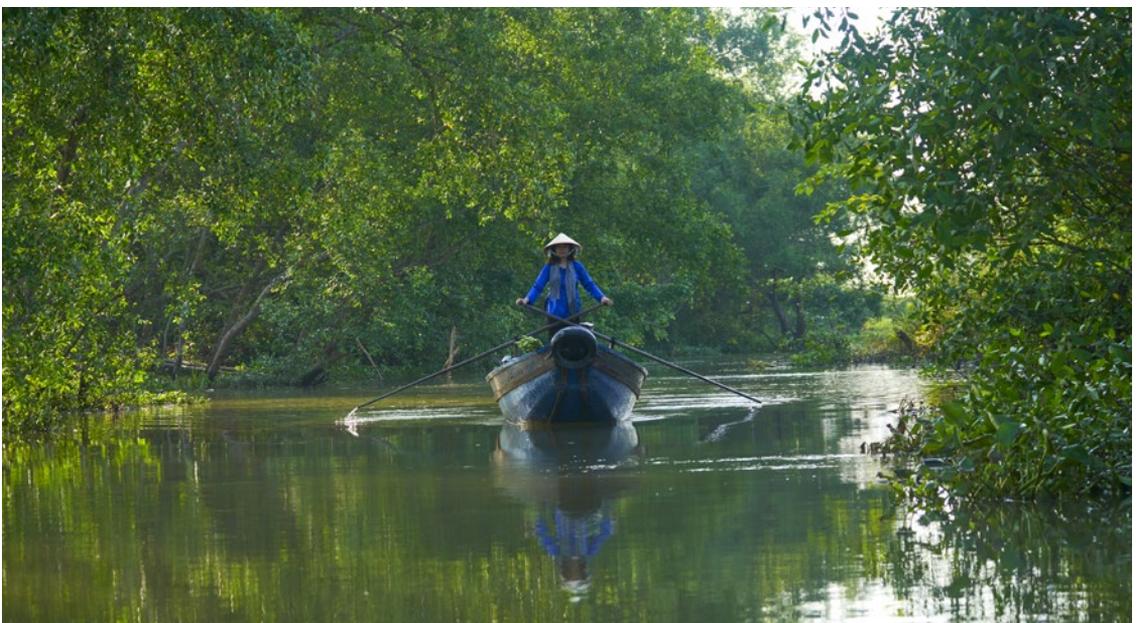

A highlight is taking an early morning boat ride along the Hau River to Cai Rang floating market, where local fishermen and farmers trade their daily catch, fresh vegetables and tropical fruit.

Other excursions include morning and afternoon walking and biking tours from Can Tho through the Delta backwaters and riverside communities to visit traditional tropical fruit orchards, handmade rice noodle workshops, cacao farms and hidden pagodas.

Town tours offer visitors an opportunity to visit Can Tho's iconic sites, including Quang Duc Pagoda, Can Tho Museum, Ong Temple and the lively markets and shops along Ninh Kieu Quay. At sunset, stroll through the outdoor street food markets where local kitchens serve an array of Vietnamese and Mekong delicacies.
